Stage 1:

You want to create a web page that prints the current date on it when it loads. While this can be done with a write or with an alert, it will be most useful to set up an area on the html page (j001.html) where the date is to be printed and then write some javascript to cause that area to be filled in with the date once the page is ready for processing.